DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
Constructed at some time in the 1890's, this row of 5 two-story brick carriage houses laid in common bond have seen a series of adaptive uses. Each original unit featured a 3-center brick arched entrance and a large window with stone sill and flat, splayed brick lintels on the first level. On the second level, two large windows sat above each entrance, and a loft entrance with wooden double-door, was let in above each first floor window. A low brick parapet with shallowly projecting miniature turrets marking the bays tops the building. Eleven seventeen and 1119 have been most drastically altered, where the impressive arched entranceways have been replaced with flat-arched entrances. Loft doors are original at 1113, 1117 and 1119. Eleven thirteen also boasts faint painted advertisements from its stint as a service station, c. 1925-35.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

These carriage houses on Hunter Alley are significant historically as they are indicative of a page in Baltimore history which has now past: the age of the horse and carriage and those owners of townhouses on Calvert Street who maintained these carriage houses containing quarters for the groom, waiting rooms for owners and their guests as well as a place for the horses and carriages.
